Forensic Occultism: The Spooky (and Not-So-Spooky) Side of Crime
December 2021

- Forensic Occultism is a likely a term you've never come across before. This article critically reviews Forensic Occultism, first defining it then, addressing pertinent challenges faced in the field before offering conclusive methods to address them.

Deadwood Dick: Freedom as a Catalyst to the West for Black Cowboys
December 2018

- Did you know  $\frac{3}{4}$  of all cowhands were black or Hispanic? This paper discusses the ending of slavery as a catalyst for black cowhands entering and driving Wild Wild West culture and systems. Why did so many black people take to the unruly and ungoverned Western world to find work? And what were the lasting results?

Medical Misinformation: Exorcisms; Treatment or Torture?
May 2019

- If your loved one was sick and the doctor suggested an exorcism, what would you say? Is it a valid medical practice or medical misinformation? This paper touches on what an exorcism is, how they are used, and their effectiveness, ultimately asking the imperative question. While they prove to be dangerous and ineffective, how can this be superstitious practice be addressed with cultural empathy and religious freedom?

Right Before Your Eyes
November 2022 (In Progress)

- Can you define human trafficking? Can you tell someone else what it looks like? This photography book aims to knock down ambiguity surrounding this dark crime and bring to light the nuances of it we see every day. If you see something, say something.
